Parent/Guardian Code of Conduct (revised 7.14.2026)

The CTJRA believes that the young people of our Association are the future of rodeo and the future of our country. It is important that the parents and guardians of the contestants realize how much the kids learn from watching the example set by the adults who attend our rodeos. It is understood that we, the adults who support our children in their rodeo endeavors, all want the best outcome for our children and for the children of our friends and our communities. It is also understood that certain things will come up during the rodeo season, just as in the rest of our lives that we will disagree with. A questionable call by a judge, the fact our kids might not have been one of the winners that day, an honest mistake made figuring out a score, or a time are just a few things that come to mind. How we choose to deal with those things can have far reaching impact on our children and our organization. Those impacts can be either positive or negative, and we have control over that outcome. We will strive to show the kids of our Association that it is possible to disagree with something and to register that disagreement in such a manner so as not to create a negative experience, environment, or memory for our children who are always watching us. We understand that we are the teachers of all the children who are within the sound of our voices and in sight of our actions. We will think before we act and show our children that we respect the sport of rodeo and the people of the Caribou Trail Junior Rodeo Association and Committee putting on the sanctioned event. We do this to set a good example for the young minds and hearts that look to us every day for guidance, strength, support and understanding. We are adults. We are the teachers. If a mistake is made by the rodeo committee, and a parent or participant receives an award that they should not have been awarded, we as the parents, agree to correct this problem immediately by returning the award to be given to the correct participant.

We the undersigned, agree with the above Code of Conduct. We understand that if this Code of Conduct is broken, we forfeit all our membership points and standings for the year.
